

Sick of those inserts?

SGA-EAC is meeting with Auxiliary Services and the Publisher of the Red & Black to solve the problem with these newspaper inserts that litter our campus. The Red & Black distributes these inserts, but the physical plant has to clean them up. Of course, this means that the cost of clean up has been passed off to you.

Businesses purchase these inserts because inserts are less expensive than buying ad space in the paper.

Anyway, an SGA-EAC member ran into some students who had collected hundreds of these inserts. The students were tearing off the business-reply cards and dropping the blank cards into a mailbox. Golly, the Rooster company will have to pay for the postage of all those cards!

If enough people mail in the cards blank, perhaps Rooster and other companies will stop buying newspaper inserts.

SGA-External Affairs Committee: We've come to snuff the Rooster.
